

A Public Office a Public Trust

Caucus time is here once more. The different gentlemen who serve the public in various offices have not been elected for life, and a good many elections will be taking place in November. Now is the time to decide upon the candidates for these positions.

It is our custom to have two political parties called Republican and Democrat each of which has an organization designed to capture public offices. These parties represent two different plans for the public welfare in national affairs. But in state, county and city affairs they merely represent two "crowds" of men each of which desires to capture and hold public offices. Probably it is unfortunate that we draw the same lines in state and local affairs that we draw in national affairs.

In local affairs the chief thing is to get good and honorable men, and it makes practically no difference whether they are Republicans or Democrats in national affairs.

The "Caucus" becomes a very important institution although it is not mentioned in state or national constitutions. At the "Caucus" the voters of each party are invited to meet and select their candidates. On election day the common voter has only his choice of voting for the men who have been nominated by the two political parties. If he wants to have good men to vote for he must be on hand at the "Caucus."

Berea's Big Family

The Fall Term is open by a larger attendance of students by several hundred than has ever been known in the past. Berea's invitation is beginning to take effect. More young men are coming to study agriculture, printing, wood-work, and more girls for nursing and home science. While a great many Berea students are away teaching, the Normal Department overflows its boundaries. In the Collegiate Department there is a tremendous increase. But it is the Academy that over-runs all bounds. Before the first day of the term was over notice had to be sent out that no more students could be admitted to the Academy, and the condition is about the same in the Foundation School.

Fathers and mothers who have sent their sons and daughters to Berea may be sure that they will be well taken care of. Some of them will have to sleep on the floor the first few nights. And until we have a good rain fall we shall have to be very careful in saving water. And there will be some other hardships caused by the great number of students which exceeded all expectations. But there is also a larger number of teachers than ever before, and a great improvement in the outfit at the Boarding Hall, a better organization of student labor, and many other improvements.

Probably it is not generally known that Berea provides a moving picture show and other entertainment for its students, besides the music, and the several playgrounds, and athletic fields. Early this term there is to be a series of important lectures by Professor H. H. Powers who is not only one of the highest authorities, but certainly the most interesting speaker, on matters of the great war.

WATER, WATER!

We have hardly realized how dry it has been for the last few weeks, but the effect on the College Water Works is quite alarming.

We all remember our great joy when Doctor Pearsons gave $50,000 for the Water Works. Since that time the College has expended $15,000 more in getting additional springs. Just now it has in hand two expensive projects for increasing the supply. One is the purchase of additional springs which can be piped into the present system, and the other is the construction of a great reservoir in the mountains, but neither of these projects helps just now.

When the Water Works were first installed, and during three-fourths of the year still, the College has more water than is needed for its own boarding halls, dormitories, and power plant, and it has been furnishing water to as many neighbors as desired it and were within reach. Each one of these neighbors thus supplied has stated that he had some well or cistern so as not to be wholly dependent upon the College water, and that he fully understood that the College does not guarantee to furnish water when it does not have a surplus beyond the real needs of its own students.

Such an exigency has now arrived and the water is cut off from outside parties except every morning at half past six, when it is turned on for fifteen minutes to allow them to get water for drinking and cooking purposes.

In the meantime the College is saving water by discontinuing the water closets in men's dormitories and by every other means. Students are instructed that they must wash their hands and faces in a pail! Some neighbors have forgotten the great blessings and favor which they have received in having water so much of the time and have said and done unpleasant things.

Even the Town Council has done things which had better not be spoken of lest law makers be convicted as law breakers!

Let us all pray for rain and reason.

LECTURES ON THE WAR

By the Man Who Knows and Can Tell

Dr. H. H. Powers, of Boston, remembered as the most interesting man who ever spoke in Berea, is to give a course of illustrated lectures on the great war, beginning in Chapel Sunday night.

Dr. Powers has traveled for many years through all European countries, and he has maps and pictures, and knows what the facts are and how to tell them.

The Wednesday night lecture will be for an admission of 25 cents—the others free.

BOMB-RUINED HOME OF OSCAR LAWLER

Ruins of home of Oscar Lawler, Los Angeles, Cal., which was blown up by a dynamite bomb and fired with two tanks of gasoline. Mr. Lawler was assistant United States attorney general for the interior department. Charles H. Mitchell was accused of setting the bomb in revenge for the breaking of a will by Attorney Lawler. He committed suicide.

The Students' Procession

The opening of the term is always an exciting event. Old students are greeting each other, new students are asking the names of the buildings, and of their classmates. The band makes a noise which is called music, the sweet chiming resounded, and hundreds of students, with their gay banners, go marching from the Ladies Hall to the Chapel.

This year there were three hundred more students in this march than ever before. The Foundation School goes first, then the Academy and Vocational, then the Normal, and last the College. When the head of the procession reaches the Chapel door, they halt and the two lines step apart so that the Faculty, which brings up the rear, marches down the two lines of students, followed by the College and other departments in reverse order, and so they enter the building.

The opening song, like a Doxology, is something which belongs to Berea, and is worth quoting—

"Thy message, Father, moves my heart;
In Gods great Kingdom I've a part.
We will praise, and trust, and serve,
In earth below and heaven above."

President Frost conducted the worship, reading from John's Gospel Christ's words about choosing His followers in order that He might give them His joy, make them not servants, but friends, and have them understand something of what God is doing in the world.

Kentucky News

Kentucky University, Transylvania, The College of the Bible, and Hamilton College opened this week with a total of 3,000 students enrolled in the four institutions.

A draft from Frankfort for a sum slightly over $6,000, as the first installment of salaries for Madison County school teachers, was received by Supt. Ben F. Edwards from Frankfort last Friday morning. All are greatly pleased at the prompt payment of their salaries.

Another Madison County show horse was sold at a fancy price this week, when Harry Francis, of Paint Lick, sold the crack chestnut mare Flashlight, to Avery S. Cooney, of Chicago, for $3,500. Edgar T. Doty has been showing this beautiful animal at the Kentucky fairs with great success all summer, and he capped the climax by taking several of the principal rings at the State Fair at Louisville with her this week.

Two More Madison Boys Welcomed Home

Many friends here are welcoming home a couple more of Madison's stalwart young sons who went to war at the call of their country and have just returned home. One of them is Lieut. H. D. Green, of Red House, who came back recently, and has been visiting his parents there and friends in Richmond. He has just gone to Jacksonville, Fla., where he accepted a position as representative of the Standard By-Products Company, of Louisville. The other boy who has just returned is Captain Charley George. Capt. George, like Lieut. Green, made a fine record in the army and is being given a cordial welcome home again. —Register

Dr. Sampsey in Richmond

Many from this County who have heard Doctor John R. Sampsey, of Louisville, will be interested to know that he will give a series of lectures in Richmond, beginning Sunday the 21st.

He is professor of Old Testament interpretation at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville, and is recognized as one of the ablest men in the denomination. Dr. Sampsey's lectures will begin September 21st.

$5,000,000 Fire In New York.

New York.—Mayor John F. Hylan narrowly escaped death or serious injury while inspecting work of the New York department in fighting the flames in the Sone and Flushing oil plant in Green Point. The Mayor was standing 100 yards from a large napalm tank when the tank exploded with a roar, sending blazing oil in all directions. Firemen said it might continue to burn for several days. The last great fire in the same plant, in 1903, continued almost a week. Damages estimated at $5,000,000; over fifty injured.

QUICK RATIFICATION OF TREATY IS ASKED

Minority Report Cites Losses Threatened by Amendments.

HITS OPPONENTS OF PACT

Declares Delay Will Make Victory in War Empty—Calls Action of the Republican Leaders "Government of Obstruction."

Washington, Sept. 12.—Rejection of the German peace treaty with its League of Nations covenant or adoption of amendments would mean sacrifice by the United States of all concessions obtained from Germany under a dictated peace, minority members of the foreign relations committee declared in a report presented to the senate.

The report presented by Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, ranking Democratic member of the committee, urged speedy ratification of the convention without amendments or reservations. It deplored "the long and unnecessary delay to which the treaty had been subjected, while locked up in the committee whose recommendations were from the start a foregone conclusion," and asserted these recommendations could have been made in July.

Senator Shields (Dem.) of Tennessee did not sign the report, having announced that he favored the covenant reservations prepared by Chairman Lodge. It was stated that he would not present a separate report. Those signing in addition to Mr. Hitchcock were Senators Williams of Mississippi, Swanson of Virginia, Pomerehne of Ohio, Smith of Arizona and Pittman of Nevada, all Democrats.

"Government by Obstruction."

The report contended that the industrial world was "in ferment," the financial world in doubt and commerce halted, while delay on the treaty had been caused "by the majority of a committee known to be out of harmony with the majority of the senate and the majority of the people." This was declared to be government by obstruction as well as by minority.

Export trade, the report said, had suffered because of delay in ratification; that private credit waited for peace and that this government, which had been advancing to European governments, had about reached the end of the authority given by congress. Private enterprise, it asserted, from now on must keep up American commerce with Europe. Answering the minority, it said exports to Germany since the armistice amounted to only 14 cents worth of American products for each person in Germany, or two cents a person a month.

Denies Merit in Proposals.

"Referring to the action of the majority of the committee," said the report, "we unite in opposing and condemning the recommendations both as to textual amendments and as to proposed reservations. As far as the proposed textual amendments are concerned, we see no reason to discuss their character at length. In our opinion they have no merit, but whether they be good, bad or indifferent, their adoption by the senate can have no possible effect except to defeat the participation of the United States in the treaty.

"None of them could by any possibility be accepted by even the great nations associated with the United States in the war, and none of them could by any possibility be dictated to Germany. To adopt any one of them, therefore, is equivalent to rejecting the treaty.

"The peace conference has acted finally upon the treaty. Great Britain has ratified it; France is about to do so, and with the action of one other power it will in all human probability be in actual operation even before the senate of the United States reaches a decision.

"Moreover, the peace conference possesses no further power to bring German representatives to Paris. The power of compulsion has been exhausted. Germany was told where to sign and when to sign, and when to ratify, and Germany has closed the chapter by signing and by ratifying. Germany cannot be compelled to do anything more or different with regard to this treaty by being confronted with an amended treaty whether once a month, day or week. There must be a finality to ultimate in a treaty by compulsion. If an amended treaty is not signed by Germany, then it is in none of its parts binding on her.

World News

The President is receiving enthusiastic reception as he moves across the country in defense of the Treaty and the League of Nations. The Japanese question and the apparently preponderant position of England in the League seem to be leading matters of opposition. Some of the Senators are following the President, speaking in opposition.

The distinguished prelate of Belgium, Cardinal Mercier, has just arrived as a visitor to the United States to express to our people the gratitude of Belgium toward us. The King and Queen may visit this country later. The Cardinal was an outspoken opponent of German occupation and was a privileged character, whom even the Germans dare not molest.

The Italian leader and patriotic enthusiast, Gabriel d'Annunzio, has rallied a large force of his countrymen with the purpose of taking possession of the sea-port of Fiume by force. Such an act would be resented by the Allies. The Italian government is seeking to put its seal of disapproval on the movement, which it looks upon as a form of mutiny.

A fine statue of Lincoln has just been unveiled in the English city of Manchester, in the north of England. It is a gift to the city, and was accepted by the mayor, after appropriate addresses emphasizing the cordial relations between the two countries. This section of England was especially sympathetic with our Union in the days of the Civil War, and saw more clearly the issues than other parts of England.

Rumania has not been willing to assent to the peace treaty which was made with Austria and which affects in some respects her interests. The opposition is based partly on territorial questions and partly on the article which provides religious tolerance. Rumania has in her population quite a number of Jews, against whom the feeling is rather bitter. Moreover, she has desired to add a considerable part of the territory of Hungary.

The Belgian coal fields are being rapidly recovered to use. It is being found that they are not so badly damaged as was at first supposed. Something over eighty percent of the output that was obtained before the war is being mined now. This makes the renewal of industry in western Europe somewhat more hopeful. The destruction of factories and the carrying off of machinery will cause delay.

The fate of the Russian leader, Kolchak, seems to shift from day to day. At one time the reports indicate that he has been forced to withdraw from a position and the next reports claim that the Bolsheviks are being driven back. He is a strong man, but too conservative a leader to meet the approval of the masses. The Allies seem to depend on his success for the unifying of Russia more than anything else.

Germany has received the demand of the Allies to change her new constitution and amend the clause which gives the German population of Austria a voice in the lower house of the legislative body. Germany protests against this action as too brusque and makes a feeble attempt to prove that it is illegal. The change, however, will have to be made, as it is clearly contrary to the Peace Treaty.

Some attempt is being made to change the location of the capital city of the League of Nations from Geneva to Brussels. Sentiment favors the choice of the Belgian city, but arrangements have already been made for the location in Geneva. A beautiful site near the lake has been chosen for the buildings, which will be attractive and commodious.

Cobalt, Ont., Sept. 9.—A strike involving 23,000 miners which lasted six weeks was brought to a close when the miners' union voted to accept the terms of settlement offered by the mine managers. The men have resumed work.

CHAPTER VIII.—Miss Thackeray warns Barnes that a man sleeping at the tavern, ostensibly a look-alike, had been seen in the house. He is rescued by a young man, and becomes interested in them.

CHAPTER IX.—The acquaintance of the storm is introduced as Miss Cameron. The man in the house party, Barnes, is rescued by a young man, and becomes interested in them.

CHAPTER X.—Miss Cameron informs him she is a prisoner in the house, appealing to him for aid and bidding him to rescue her. He is rescued by a young man, and becomes interested in them.

CHAPTER XI.—At breakfast the supposed look-alike introduces himself as Sprague, a government agent. He is rescued by a young man, and becomes interested in them.

CHAPTER XII.—Barnes agrees to accompany Sprague on a nocturnal visit to Green Fancy. He is rescued by a young man, and becomes interested in them.

CHAPTER XIII.—They enter the grounds in silence, Sprague entering the house, Barnes looking on. He is rescued by a young man, and becomes interested in them.

CHAPTER XIV.

A Flight, a Stone-Cutter's Shed, and a Voice Outside.

"Why have you come up here?" She came swiftly to his side. "Think, the Lord, I made it," he whispered, breathlessly. "I came up because there was nowhere else to go. I thought I heard voices, a man and a woman speaking. They seemed to be quite close to me. Don't be alarmed, Miss Cameron. I am confident that I can—"

"And now that you are here, trapped as I am, what do you propose to do? You cannot escape. Go back before it is too late."

"Is Sprague—where is he?" "He is somewhere in the house. I was to wait until he—Oh, Mr. Barnes, I—I am terrified. You will never know this—"

"Treat him," he said. "He is a man, we'll be safely out of here in a little while, and then it will all look simple to you. You are ready to go? Good! Sit down, do! If he doesn't return in a minute or two, I'll take a look about the house myself. I don't intend to desert him. I know this door pretty well, and the lower one. The stairs are—"

"But the stairway is closed at the bottom by a solid steel curtain. It is made to look like a panel in the wall. You are not to venture outside this room, Mr. Barnes. I forbid it. You—"

"How did Sprague get out? You said your door was locked."

"He had a key. I do not know where he obtained—"

"You—you know about the crown jewels?" she murmured. Her body seemed to stiffen. "Then you know who I am?"

"No. You will tell me tomorrow."

"Yes, yes—tomorrow," she whispered.

For some time there was silence. Both were listening intently for sounds in the hall. She leaned closer to whisper in his ear. Their shoulders touched. He wondered if she experienced the same delightful thrill that ran through his body. She told him of the man who watched across the hall from the room supposed to be occupied by Lord the secretary, and of Sprague's incomprehensible daring.

"Where is Mr. Currier?" he asked.

Her breath fanned his cheek, her lips were close to his ear. "There is no Mr. Currier here. He died four months ago in Florida."

"I suspected as much," he did not press her for further revelations.

"Sprague should be here by this time. I must go out there and see if he requires any—"

She clutched his arm frantically. "You shall do nothing of the kind. You shall not—"

"Sh! What do you take me for, Miss Cameron? He may be sorely in need of help. Do you think that I would leave him to God knows what sort of fate?"

"But he said positively that I was to go in case he did not return in—In fifteen minutes," she begged. "He may have been cut off and was compelled to escape from another—"

"Just the same, I've got to see what has become of—"

"No! No!" She arose with him, dragging at his arm. "Do not be foolish. You are not skilled in—"

"There is only one way to stop me, Miss Cameron. If you will come with me now—"

"But I must know whether he secured them—"

"Then let me go. I will find out whether he has succeeded."

He was rougher than he realized in wrenching his arm free. She uttered a low moan and covered her face with her hands. Undeterred, he crossed to the door. His hand was on the knob when a door slammed violently somewhere in a distant part of the house.

A harsh shout of alarm rang out, and then the rush of heavy feet over thickly carpeted floors.

Barnes acted with lightning swiftness. He sprang to the open window, half-carrying, half-dragging the girl with him.

"Now for it!" he whispered. "Not a second to lose. Climb upon my back, quick, and hang on for dear life!"

He had scrambled through the window and was lying flat across the sill. "Hurry! Don't be afraid. I am strong enough to carry you if the vines do their part."

With surprising alacrity and sureness she crawled out beside him and then over upon his broad back, clasping her arms around his neck. Holding to the ledge with one hand he felt for and clutched the thick vine with the other.

With a gasp, he explained in a few words and then, commanding her to stand perfectly still, dropped to the ground and carefully felt his way forward. Again he flashed the light. In an instant he understood. They were on the brink of a shallow quarry.

Lying there, he made swift calculations. The quarry, no longer of use to the grass plot into the shrubbery. She did not utter a sound.

Presently he set her down. His breath was gone, his strength exhausted.

"An you—manage to—walk a little way?" he gasped. "Clasp me your hand, and follow as close to my heels as you can. Better that I should bump him things than you."

Shoulds were now heard, and shrill blasts on a police whistle split the air.

On they stumbled, blindly, recklessly. He spared her many an injury by taking it himself. More than once she murmured sympathy when he crashed into a tree or floundered over a log.

Flatterly at sea, he was now guessing at the course they were taking. Whether their frantic dash was leading them toward the Tavern, or whether they were circling back to Green Fancy, he knew not. Panting, he forced onward.

At last she cried out, quaveringly: "Oh, I—I can go no further! Can't we—is it not safe to stop for a moment? My breath—"

"God bless you, yes," he exclaimed, and came to an abrupt stop. She leaned heavily against him, gasping for breath. "I haven't the faintest idea where we are, but we must be some distance from the house. We will rest a few minutes and then take it easier, more cautiously. I am sorry, but it was the only thing to do, rough as it was."

"I know, I understand. I am not complaining, Mr. Barnes. You will find me ready and strong and—"

"Let me think. I must try to get my bearings. Good Lord, I wish Sprague were here. He can see in the dark. We are off the path, that's sure."

"Do you think he escaped?"

"I am sure of it. Those whistles were sounding the alarm. He may come this way. The chances are that your flight has not been discovered. Do you feel like going on? We must beat them to the Tavern. They—"

"I am all right now," she said, and they were off again. Barnes now picked his way carefully and with the greatest caution. He could only pray that he was going in the right direction.

An hour—but what seemed three as long—passed and they had not come to the edge of the forest. Her feet were beginning to drag; he could tell that by the effort she made to keep up with him. From time to time he paused to allow her to rest.

"You are plucky," he once said to her.

"I am afraid I could not be so plucky if you were not so strong," she sighed, and he loved the thrill, whimsical little twist she put into her reply.

To his dismay they came abruptly upon a region abounding in large rocks. This was new territory to him. His heart sank.

"My Jove, I—I believe we are farther away from the road than when we started. We must have been going up the slope instead of down."

"In any case, Mr. Barnes," she murmured, "we have found something to sit down upon."

He chuckled. "If you can be as cheerful as all that, we shouldn't miss the cushions," he said, and, for the first time, risked a dash of the electric torch. The survey was brief. He led her forward a few paces to a flat boulder, and there they seated themselves.

"I wonder where we are," she said.

"I am inclined to suspect that we are above Green Fancy, but a long way off to the right of it. Admitting that to be the case, I am afraid to retrace our steps. The Lord only knows what we might blunder into."

"I think the only sensible thing to do, Mr. Barnes, is to make ourselves as snug and comfortable as we can and wait for the first signs of day-break."

He scowled—and was glad that it was too dark for her to see his face. He wondered if she fully appreciated what would happen to him if the pursuers came upon him in this forbidden spot. He could almost picture his own body lying there among the rocks and rattling, white shells, she would merely go back to Green Fancy.

"I fear you do not realize the extreme gravity of the situation. We must get out of these woods if I have to carry you in my arms."

"I shall try to keep going," she said quickly. "Forgive me if I seemed to falter a little. I—I am ready to go on when you say the word."

"You poor girl! Hang it all, perhaps you are right and not I. Sit still and I will reconsider a bit. If I can find a place where we can bide among these rocks, we'll stay here till the sky begins to lighten. Sit—"

"No! I shall not let you leave me for a second. Where you go, I go." She struggled to her feet, suppressing a groan, and thrust a determined arm through his.

"That's worth remembering," said he, and whether it was a muscular necessity or an emotional exhortation that caused him to tighten on hers, none save he would ever know.

After a few minutes prowling among the rocks they came to the face of what subsequently proved to be a sheer wall of stone. He flashed the light, and, with an exclamation, started back. Not six feet ahead of them the earth seemed to end; a yawning black gulf lay beyond. Apparently they were on the very edge of a cliff.

"Good Lord, that was a close call," he gasped. He explained in a few words and then, commanding her to stand perfectly still, dropped to the ground and carefully felt his way forward. Again he flashed the light. In an instant he understood. They were on the brink of a shallow quarry.

Lying there, he made swift calculations. The quarry, no longer of use to

A BAD RUNAWAY

On Wednesday afternoon a horse belonging to Mr. Tip Cooper, of near Slate Lick, broke loose from in front of Welch's Store and ran down Railroad Street. Mr. Cooper was thrown out of the rig as it turned on to Boone Street in front of James Baker's yard. He struck his head and shoulder on the sidewalk and received some very painful injuries.

He was picked up unconscious and carried to the Robinson Hospital, where he was given prompt medical attention.

The latest report from the Hospital is that he rested fairly well Wednesday night, and there are reasonable hopes for his recovery.

THE WOMAN'S CLUB

A new club of women has been organized in town with the simple name, "The Woman's Club of Berea." Its purpose, like that of the clubs that have existed here, will be both the cultivation of the social and intellectual life of its members and the fostering of everything that is beneficial to the life of Berea people, and specifically the promotion of such special measures for civic betterment as it may decide to undertake. The membership is not limited to a definite number, in order that it may be the better able to serve the highest interests of the women and the community. The nature and scope of the service it hopes to render Berea is indicated by the names of its six standing committees as follows:

1. A Committee on Health and Social Hygiene, to stimulate greater attention to those conditions which affect the health and morals of the community.

2. A Civic Committee, to inspire greater effort along the line of beautifying our streets and homes.

3. A Committee on Home Economics. Through this committee the club expects, with co-operation of the Department of Domestic Science of the College, to establish in the near future a community kitchen which will be open every Wednesday and will afford an opportunity for every householder to secure, by previous order, various kinds of food prepared for the table, an opportunity that will doubtless be highly appreciated and extensively patronized. It expects to inaugurate this work the first Wednesday in October.

4. A Music Committee, to continue in some form the benefit and enjoyment we have had during the summer in our Community Sing.

5. A Literary Committee, to cultivate and gratify the literary tastes and needs of its members and others.

6. An Educational Committee, One specific thing which the club hopes to bring about is a consolidated High School in Berea which shall embrace in its field the outlying districts, as well as the city itself.

The club also hopes to secure for the town a Community House to be used as a center for community activities, which is also to serve as a memorial to our soldiers. It will afford a place for lectures, entertainments, discussion of questions of civic interest, a headquarters for the Boy Scouts and a swimming pool where boys and girls and men and women can at all seasons of the year enjoy the very delightful and health-giving sport of bathing and swimming. Such a bathing pool is one of Berea's greatest needs, and this effort should meet with enthusiastic support.

It is to be hoped that the work of the new club will engage the hearty co-operation of all the women of Berea and will receive in every possible way the generous encouragement and practical assistance of the men likewise, and will result in real progress in all that is good in our common life. Thank God for women! We do not wish them "all transported far beyond the northern sea."

A REAL BEREA HEROINE

Precozity is a characteristic of a wide awake, normal child. The instinct for self-preservation manifests itself early. And in some children altruistic tendencies and the heroic qualities appear along with these others.

All these traits were recently shown developed in a remarkable degree by Helen Roberts, 13-year-old daughter of E. L. Roberts, Superintendent of the College Printing Office. Her coolness, prompt decision and action, and thoughtfulness for others were the means of saving her own life and the life of a little child.

Secretary Vaughn's car was standing near the brow of the hill in front of his home. Helen and the Vaughn baby climbed into the car, and were about to be followed by other children preparatory to driving the car down the hill. The movement of the children accidentally jarred the car enough to start it moving, the brake being only loosely applied. As it moved backward it gained momentum. Every effort made to apply the brake or reverse the car failed. The car shot to the brink of the hill, leaving the life of the baby at the disposal of Providence and Helen Roberts.

Helen was equal to the occasion. She made frantic efforts to open the door after failing to place the baby in its mother's hands, who had been thrown to the ground by the machine. Then she attempted to climb over the side with the baby, but the jolting car caused her to drop it. In dropping the child she instinctively threw it beyond the wheels. Then she bared out just as the car went over the bank, thus saving her own life and that of the child, but staying by her task until she was sure the baby was safe!

The car shot like an arrow down the steep hill, turned turtle and rolled over and over to the bottom. This was clearly a case of risk-taking her own life to save the baby. Perhaps she did not think of it in that way—it was all just a matter of half a dozen seconds. But her conduct showed clearly that she was determined to rescue the baby before attempting to save herself.

We are not always aware of the heroic spirits that walk about our doors, but it gives us greater confidence in the race to know that there are people living among our neighbors who when a crisis comes, will put the life and safety of another above that of their own life. And heroes and heroines walk past our doorways each day, dressed in the halos of the work-a-day world, and some of us have not the keenness of vision to recognize them.

Helen Roberts is such a heroine!

We have been glad to welcome some of Berea College boys asking for information as to our work.

The Executive Secretary has visited four of the district schools. We believe the children in our school will be glad to have a Junior Red Cross organization.

Professor Dizney called in the office Saturday to talk over the prospects and needs of our Graded School.

SELECTING SEED CORN

The great shortage of corn suitable for seed over a large part of Kentucky two years ago threatened for a time to result in a serious reduction in average of this most important crop. Owing to the fortunate fact that considerable corn in southeastern Kentucky was found to be of good quality, this danger was averted and farmers were able to obtain sufficient seed of a fair quality but with considerable trouble and expense.

Much of the seed bought was of various inferior types, the sections where it was used and its is doubtful as to what results will be obtained as from home-grown seed of tested varieties.

The careless practice of depending upon corn taken from the crib in the spring for planting was responsible for the shortage of seed. The 1917 crop matured late and, because of unfavorable drying weather, the grain contained a large percentage of water when put into the crib. Corn dries out slowly in cribs, due to the limited circulation of air and most of the moisture was still in the grains when the severe freezing weather came in early December. As a result the germ was destroyed, the few farmers who gathered seed when the corn first ripened, or even when the first husking was done, and gave it an opportunity to dry out quickly, had good seed. This shows that even with the extremely unfavorable and unusual climatic conditions prevailing two years ago shortage of seed is unnecessary.

Certainly, with the experience of two years ago so fresh in mind, few farmers will neglect to gather an adequate supply of seed this fall at the earliest opportunity. In those critical years in our history when such great issues depend upon the production of good crops, we must take every precaution to produce such crops. No other factor is more important in getting good yields of corn than good seed and with no other crop is it easier and cheaper to be assured of having good seed. First-class seed cannot be had in any year by getting it from the crib in the spring. While such seed may grow, it will not give as vigorous and strong plants as seed that has been properly cared for.

How to Select Seed

Selecting seed from the field just previous to cutting the crop, or when the corn is ripe enough to cut, is by far the most satisfactory method of selection. Not only does this early gathering insure plenty of time for the ears to dry out thoroughly before freezing weather but it permits the selection of ears from the most vigorous and healthy plants and from the stalks that most nearly meet the grower's ideal in regard to height, location of ear, the angle of the ear, etc. Like produces like, and continued selection for these characteristics will tend to produce a strain of corn in which all the plants approach the ideal sought for.

In general, we may say that the varieties of corn grown in Kentucky would be improved if we could secure more stocky and shorter plants, with the ears carried uniformly lower down on the stalk. Such a type of corn would be easier to harvest and be less likely to be blown down by strong winds. In addition it is desirable that the tips of the ears hang downward as such ears shed rain better and are less likely to be damaged. Another desirable characteristic is uniformity in maturity. Only by field selection can we hope to influence the type of plant.

Experiments have not shown that any particular type of ear is better than another, as far as yield is concerned. Thus the grower may suit his own fancy in selecting a type of ear. Uniformity of type is desirable, however, as an indication of careful selection and breeding. It is natural to select large ears for seed and there is some evidence that the selection of large ears may have some influence upon yield.

Rules for Selecting Seed Corn

1. From hills with two stalks checked.
2. From stalks bearing two or more ears, or one good ear.
3. From good-sized stalks.
4. Medium height stalks.
5. Ears of proper height from the ground, from 4 to 5 feet.
6. Shank of medium length, ear pendant hanging over.
7. Ears of good length.
8. Ears well rounded over the tips and butts.
9. Ears large around.
10. Ears with small cob and large kernels.
11. Ears with wedge-shaped kernels.
12. Ears with grains in straight rows.
13. Ears with grains plump and firm on the cob.
14. Ears with grains rather smooth dented.
15. Ears with grains not mixed same color.

The first seven rules apply to selecting from cornfield. Go through corn and mark in some way the stalks you are going to select from and leave them standing without topping or blading. Let corn mature naturally on standing stalks. The last eight rules will apply to selecting after gathering. Shuck the corn and put up in an open, dry place, or hang with wire or string where rats can't get to it.

Don't Forget How Scarce Seed Corn Was in 1918

Next week The Citizen will have an article on how to care for seed corn.

Can Anyone Know?

By REV. W. W. KETCHUM
Director of the Evening Classes,
Holy Bible Institute, Chicago

THESE things have I written unto you, that ye may know that ye have eternal life in the Son of God. I John 5:13

Then I know in this life whether or not he is eternally saved.

Rev. W. W. Ketchum

First of all, the Bible states plainly that all people of whatever race or class are lost.

This message of the Bible is repeated by many, but why should we know the truth about ourselves especially since God, who tells us we are lost, also tells us that he has made provision whereby we may be saved?

If for a single moment you doubt that all men are lost, I would ask you to read the third chapter of Romans, and find out just what God says is the actual condition of all men. The teaching of this chapter in Romans, which is confirmed by other portions of the Word of God, gives the plain, unvarnished truth regarding this matter.

It says of those who have failed to make Christ their Savior that because of this failure, since they are afflicted with sin, they shall perish. What could be plainer concerning this than the statement of our Lord himself spoken to those who have not settled this momentous question: "Unless ye repent ye shall all likewise perish;" or this one, "He that believeth not the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him."

Now what does the Bible say of that person who has by faith accepted the Lord Jesus Christ as his Savior? Does it say of him that he is eternally saved, or does it leave him in doubt? Logically, if the one who has not taken Christ as his Savior is eternally lost, then conversely it is true that the one who has taken Christ as his Savior is eternally saved. But does the Bible teach this, and does it plainly give the believer in the Lord Jesus Christ the assurance of his salvation, as it gives the unbeliever the assurance that he is lost? It certainly seems reasonable that if one who fails to accept Christ as his Savior can know he is eternally lost, the one who accepts Christ as his Savior should be able to know he is eternally saved. This is precisely what our text says the believer may know: "These things have I written unto you—that ye may know," not hope, nor feel, but "know that ye have eternal life."

Numerous passages in the Word of God substantiate this teaching, and it is only because we have hearts of unbelief that we ever doubt it. It is so wonderful, and it seems too good to be true, that God should eternally save those who accept Christ as their personal Savior. But it is true just the same, for God has said it, and he cannot lie.

It is a marvel of God's grace that the believer in the Lord Jesus Christ at once has eternal life (John 3:16); that he passes at once from death into life, and that he shall not come into judgment (John 5:24). God who saves has promised to finish the job, and has made provision to do so. It is not for us, if we really have appropriated Christ as our Savior, to doubt that God will faithfully finish our salvation; but as Paul tells the Philippians (Phil. 1:6), so should we be confident of this very thing, "that he which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ."

Church Must Be Democratic.

An undemocratic church in a democratic age is an anachronism, and no matter how ancient her lineage, or well established her historic position, address she is in close and sympathetic touch with those great world movements she is doomed to defeat and to spiritual deadness and decay.—Bishop Guerry.

FOR SALE

Highly-accrue stock, grain and tobacco farm. Rolling limestone soil with some bottom land. Has been owned by same man for past 36 years and he has, because of ill health and scarcity of labor, neglected it for the past few years. Thirty acres of virgin soil was covered with scrub timber and thick bushes until fire ran through it last week, burning everything to the ground. With very little labor would make fine corn and tobacco land for next year. Good six-room house, barn 10x10, in excellent repair. Plenty of fruit for family use and located on good road with coal route and school wagon passing door. Four miles to two good railroad stations. Aged owner will sell for $2,500.

SIMPLE SERVICES

Mark Last Rites Over Bier of Distinguished Jurist

With bells tolling a requiem, the remains of Judge Anthony Hollins Roraman were taken to Richmond's beautiful cemetery Thursday afternoon, and laid to final rest. Funeral services for the distinguished jurist were held at his home on West Main Street. The bier was a veritable mass of blossoms, the last tribute of love and esteem from those among whom he had lived so long, and who knew and honored him highly. Services were conducted at the home by his pastor, Dr. Homer W. Carpenter, pastor of the First Christian Church. A passage of Scripture was read, a prayer was made, and a hymn by a choir from his church. The pallbearers were his five sons, Messrs. Curtis, George, A. R., Jr., Lucien and Paul Roraman and Warfield Bennett, a son-in-law. A hymn was sung at the grave, and then a prayer and the simple yet impressive rites over one of Madison's most distinguished sons were concluded.—Register.
